I am happy to say that the manner in which I conducted the inquest in the case meets the

COLONEL GARDINER'S ANSWER.

Dariet-Attorney Gardiner, in answer to Mr. Weeks declared that in murder cases of great importance the Court had uniformly refused perentioning the cases of Carlyle Harris, Dr. R. W. Buchanan, Dr. H. B. Meyer and Mary Allos Plening. He declared that no rights of the defendant were at issue. He said that the indictment against Molineux charged the specific crime, and that consequently Molineux knew exactly what he was charged with and to what he had to answer. He said that Mr. Weeks, with a stenographer, was present throughout the hearing and consequently was in possession ulmitted to the Grand Jury under advice order Goff, who held that the examination the United States calls attention to the fact that it is possible to grow peach trees which are hardy and which will hear fruit even under these severe conditions, and efforts of growers and experimenters will undoubtedly be stimulated to produce a peach which will combine the hardy qualities of the Hill's Chill and the juciness and delicious flavor of more tender varieties. This combination must come about largely though hybridization or cross-fertilization. Hybridization in fruits is frequently productive of wonderful results. The operation is performed by transferring the pollen from one variety or species, say the hardy kind, to the flower organs of the other kind, when the seed thus produced will develop into a tree which may combine the best qualities of the two parcials—the hardiness of the one and the fine flavor and fruiting capacity of the other. Of course this is not likely to occur with a single attempt, but where such experiments are carried on they are on a larke scale, and hundreds of hybrid specimens are secured. Fol-

"Yes, he was sitting at a machine there, making dolls' clothes."

District-Attorney Dyer cross-examined Mrs. Cody. She said that Judge Brown, of Wyoming, counsel for Mrs. Pierce, gave her the first intimation that Mrs. Angell was not the wife of Jay Gould.

A letter was produced by the prosecution written by Mrs. Cody to John Edford, son of Mrs. Edford, formerly Mary Ann Shields, who made an affidavit that she was a witness to the Gould-Angell marriage. In this the writer asked him to take care that his mother was rendy to give her testimony for Mrs. Cody's side. It ended as follows. "Remember John, that I handle the money," and "John, burn this letter."

"What money did you mean?" was asked. "I meant the money which Mrs. Angell would receive if she proved her dower rights."

Letters from Mrs. Cody to Mrs. Edford were read, in which the former spoke of fully rewarding Mrs. Edford if she would testify concerning the alleged marriage as the writer wished, but naming no fixed sum.

Mr. Dyer then produced a letter, which, he said, was one of those written by the defendant to John Edford. Speaking of Mrs. Angell, it said: "She was not married to Gould; she was married to an old Frenchman. He was sixty-two years of age when she married. This must have been the marriage to which your mother was witness."

This was shown to the witness, who was asked if it was in her handwriting. She replied that she could not tell, as she could not always recognize her writing. After long questioning, she acknowledged her signature at the end, but concerning the writing she was firm.

The District-Attorney's cross-examination was searching at this point, and Mrs. Cody grew restive under it. She showed signs of breaking down, became slightly however, as in a minute she was calm and callected as usual.

In his redirect examination Mr. Dugan read letters written to Mrs. Cody by her former counsel. Amusa J Parker, ir. of Albany. The purpose of reading these was to show that Mrs. Cody had fo
